LIFE IN A GREAT CITY.

NEW YORK FOR HARRISON.

THE VOTE IN GREAT DOUBT FOR REPUBLICAN HOPE.

The Party Called on to Do Its Duty Both the Right Track—No Doubt and No Hesitancy Among Leaders—A Review of the Situation—Why Labour Is Not a Unit—The Wisconsin Controversy—Address from Boston Today—General Political Notes.

New York, Aug. 5.—[Special.]—Do you know why the betting on the result of the Presidential election in New York has varied seven per cent, to one against Harrison to six to five in favor? It is always safe to forecast everything the enthusiastic politicians tell. Still, making all due allowance for the noise and energy of the men interested in having New York cast her Electoral vote for Harrison and Morton, can you put one good reason why the Republicans may count on the carrying of the province of the Empire State to their side. What are some of the reasons for Republican confidence? Well, in the first place, the party in New York is united as it never has been since 1856, when the vote of the State was cast for Fremont. [re-cole. The Republicans carried New York by 50,000 in 1884 by over 30,000 plurality, when they were not nearly so well united as they are now. In spite of the fact that Cleveland stands to the support of the ticket here as the champion of that year, there was left for the trouble, several leaders, and Hayworth and Bill Grimth, got more a Republican vote than he had to defeat a popular one. This year the old leaders are not actively enthusiastic. The names of the men of labor, are used, Harper's and Cleveland's opposition to Gompers and Powderly, and the same cause has made Gould favor the triumph of non-factory over politics. He got Bob Ingersoll actively into the contention, and every vote of importance counts for the success of Republican strength will be needed for the election.

The disclosure of Democratic treachery here cause a feeling of serious fear that some Republicans, however, do not appreciate. Many of the party the city are disposed to a feeling of security and confidence that is not justified by the circumstances. There is a feeling that a thousand majority in a Presidential year is enough, but for obvious reasons that is thoroughly unsatisfactory and dangerous.

Everybody who went to the Chicago Convention expected to get a great deal for nominating manager Thomas C. Platt and Warner Miller. Everybody was satisfied. There was no fight, no enmity and both Platt and Miller labored straight as beavers for the ticket and worked. They had their reward. Platt was elected Senator by the Legislature, and Miller was given the Republican nomination for Governor. Platt is the best organizer in the State, and Miller is the strongest candidate. Platt's organization is working with a will. Miller is the strongest candidate. Platt's organization is working with a will. Miller is the strongest candidate. Platt's organization is working with a will.

AFTER THE HOLOCAUST.

[MISSING THE VICTIMS OF THE NEW YORK FIRE.]

The Charred and Blackened Remains Consigned to the Earth in the Potter's Field—Scenes About the Open Graves—Four Hundred Escape the Flames and Confusion in Crowding for Exit in a Death-Trap from Dark Corners.

New York, Aug. 5.—[Special.]—The last grave in the potter's field was filled to-day when the bodies of seven persons unclaimed since the fire of Friday destroyed Adler's Dime Museum and Excelsior Theater were consigned to the earth in the two Jewish sections. Some of the bodies, it is feared, will never be identified, as they were so badly burned that they fell to pieces when touched. Many of the victims were buried at the graves by the large number of people who came to sympathize.

Weakened and disfigured as they were, the faces presented a ghastly and moving spectacle, showing the facts of pain to bravely endured, and the terrible anguish of their last moments. Many of the bodies were those of women and children, who, with the others, though more closely resembling the ashes of a burned fire, were not recognizable as the human forms they were but a few hours ago.

Soon after 1 o'clock Mr. J. Pendleton, the undertaker, arrived at the morgue with several of the members of the Jewish Relief Society and directed that the United Hebrew Charities Society must assume the responsibility for the burial of all remaining in the hands of the undertaker. Fifteen bodies were then delivered. Three wagons were taken to the cemetery, which entered, in open formation, the gate leading to the potter's field, followed by a conveyance containing the people in charge. In spite of the early hour which the funeral had passed, and although the graves had been dug but a few hours, there were a number of persons present. Among the number were several who had been spectators at the fire. Many of the mourners had come from Brooklyn and Jersey City. Some of the bodies were those of children, and the little coffins were placed in the graves first. Then came the larger ones, containing the remains of women and men. Many of the mourners were overcome by grief, and had to be led away from the graves. Others broke down completely, and had to be carried away. Before the last coffin was lowered into the ground, Rabbi Isaac Mayer Wise, of the Temple Beth-El, delivered a short address, in which he said:

"We are gathered here to-day to perform the last sad rites over the remains of our brethren who perished in the flames. Their bodies were consumed, and their ashes mingled with the ashes of the building in which they were burned. Their souls have gone to the God who gave them. Let us not mourn for them, but for ourselves, who are left behind to suffer and struggle in this world of sorrow. Let us not mourn for them, but for the people of this city, who have been deprived of a place of amusement. Let us not mourn for them, but for the widows and orphans

Newspaper writers are especially invited to offer stories, and no one is barred even when the employés of The Tribune. In order to secure impartiality in the awards the editor of The Tribune will name the selection of prize-winners to be made by disinterested and competent judges who shall be in ignorance of the authorship of the manuscripts submitted to them.

The names of writers may or may not be printed with their stories, as the writers themselves may wish.

If anyone the copyright of all stories accepted, published, and paid for will rest in The Tribune; the manuscript of others will be returned to the writers.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS.

The great names of the War of the Rebellion are fast passing into history. In the next few years the survivors of the mighty host that responded to the call of Lincoln in 1861 will be passed away. Of the Union army Gen. Grant has passed away. Gen. Sherman has retired from active service, and now Gen. Sheridan has answered the last bugle-call and the patient soldier and hard fighter is at rest.

The career of Gen. Sheridan's life is the record of a soldier. For he only knew events in which he had been spectator or actor. Born in 1831, the year of the graduation, and closing with the exalted position of Lieutenant-General and Chief of the Army, a promotion which came to him unsolicited and solely as the reward of his unselfish service to his country. His career during those years has been so familiar that it is unnecessary to recall its details. In the War of the Rebellion he began as Chief Engineer of the Fifteenth Infantry and Chief Quartermaster and Commissary of the Army of Southeastern Missouri, and shortly afterward received the appointment of Quartermaster in the Indiana in the campaigns of 1861. His first active service in the field was in the Shenandoah Valley, first as Colonel of the Second Michigan Volunteer Cavalry, to which regiment his fighting qualities were shown in the assault of the Rebels from Corinth, Miss., to Booneville, July 1, 1862, he was made Brigadier-General of Volunteers. This followed the brilliant series of engagements with Stuart and Mosby, which led up to Murfreesboro, where he had made a Major

SIMON CAMERON AT HOME.

HOW THE VETERAN CAMERON HAS SAFE AT HOME AND AT REST.

The Ohio Old Statesman Living Like a Plain Farmer on Donegal Farm—Interesting to Him and Others and Comment of Opposite Sentimental Power—His Home, Children and Visitors and All the Old Love Stories and Bright Reminiscences of a Long and Eventful Career.

Correspondence Letter to the New York Sun.

Simon, of the ancient town in Lancaster County, had a few miles from his post office in the town nearly seventy years ago the oldest protestant Benedictine in the United States spent a quiet week with the boy men of his political faith, were conferring in the hall in Chicago and selecting Presidential candidates in that so-called ballot might be placed before the people. The last days of Don Cameron is still much in evidence, and the broad shoulders and weighty person of the old man. He usually dresses in a gray suit with a loose hat, and, according to the custom that a Pennsylvania farmer has, and invariably wears cow hide, wearing and a long hickory staff. He has two places of residence, between which he divides his time with ease. His home in the city is one of the most elegant and comfortable in Washington, and overlooks a broad expanse of the Susquehanna River, through an ancient grove of trees among which still stands the chair in which a band of Indians had John Harris, the founder of Harrisburg, to make terms, with the surrounding country. Here he has his library, and here he receives his friends. The country home is a plain farm house, with the surrounding acres of fertile land, which are cultivated by tenants. To get to and from the city home from the farm he has to drive through the bustling city of Harrisburg, where the Cameron family still has many friends. Every one knows the old man's face, and everybody has a pleasant word for him. He is not approved and unfortunately favorable, to the left of the road leading from Harrisburg

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE.

The quick rising, the Royal Baking Powder is superior to all other leavening agents. It is absolutely pure and wholesome and of the highest leavening power. It is always uniform in strength and quality and never fails to make light, sweet, and palatable and nutritive food. Bread, biscuits, muffins, cakes, etc., raised with Royal Baking Powder may be eaten hot without distressing results to the most delicate digestive organs. It will keep in any climate without deterioration.

Prof. R. A. Witt, U. S. Government Chemist, after examining officially the principal baking powders of the country, reported:

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have as found it in many cases made both for that company and the United States Government.

"Because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the ingredients, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public.

"Try Ayer's Pills"

For Constipation, Dyspepsia, and Sick Headache, Lansing, of Traverse, N. Y., says: "I recommended as a cure for chronic Constipation, Ayer's Pills have relieved me from that terrible and often fatal disease. I cannot praise them too highly." Mrs. Lydia Ann Smith, of the same town, writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for Constipation, and find them the best medicine I ever took. They relieve me when other cathartics fail." Try the use of Ayer's Pills when, in your opinion, they are needed, and you will be convinced of their superior merits. Ayer's Pills, being purely vegetable, are perfectly safe to take, and, as a laxative, should form a portion of every household's medicine stock. They are sugar-coated, and are the cheapest pill in the market.

Rheumatism.

Mr. Hutchings, of Rockford, Ohio, writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for various pains, and I think they are the best Pills in the world. My wife has a box of them in the house all the time. They have cured me of Rheumatism and Neuralgia, when other medicines failed to relieve me. I have used Ayer's Pills, I have taken them from time to time, and they never failed to do me good. I have always derived great benefit from Ayer's Pills. When I take cold, I use Ayer's Pills, and they relieve me in a few hours. I have taken them for Constipation, Sick Headache, etc., and they never failed to relieve me. I have also given them to my children, and they have always been satisfied with the result. I have never found their equal as a family medicine, and I shall always keep them in the house."
